Portfolio managers commentary

September brought with it a number of unsettling surprises for the world of finance.

The sanitary crisis reared its ugly head again as the number of cases detected increased, notably in Europe. The possibility of new partial or total 'shut downs' in this region rose as a consequence. After the economic ordeals of the first half of the year, this news weighed negatively on local consumer and business sentiment, breaking the potential for any quick European recovery.

In the United States, many in the finance industry were expecting an agreement between Democrats and Republicans on a new stimulus package. But it was not to be. Certain disillusioned investors took home their gains on assets that had performed well in 2020, notably in the technology sector. After a spectacular performance, the NASDAQ index representing many of these tech. corporations gave back close to -12% over several weeks.

The fixed income world was unsettled by events in the US stock market. Its positive progression over the last few months was stopped in its tracks. Despite this pause, it is important to highlight the trends feeding the Fixed Income performance over the last guarter. These remain unchanged. As a reminder, American interest rates are to remain at historically low levels for some time to come and the Federal Reserve's asset purchasing program continues to be fully deployed.

Next stop on the uncertainty radar could be the US presidential election with a possibility of an unexpected outcome.

ASG's focus remains on quality bond instruments with a strong performance potential. The current and expected volatility should provide opportunities to further deploy its investment mandate.
