Portfolio managers commentary

In August, the Federal Reserve's Chairman, Mr Powell, confirms his willingness to continue his accommodative policy coming out of his annual Jackson Hole meeting. As the 'big boss', his words had greater carry with investors, relative to contrarian comments from his lieutenants. To justify his policy stance, unemployment figures came in weaker than expected. Furthermore, the investment bank, Goldman Sachs, pointed to a potential easing of US economic activity in the coming months. To cut a long story short, the tapering of bond purchase and the specter of higher interest rate, a rather unfavorable scenario for Fixed Income assets, seemed to be pushed out into a semi-distant future.

The market for alternative bonds such as subordinated debt remained unchanged compared to July. Structurally, there are always more buyers chasing a limited investment asset pool. Despite the summer period, this situation has not changed. With such a favorable backdrop, ASG continued its strategic adjustment outlined in its previous monthly report.
